

Making Group Decisions

Think of examples of decision making that affect groups of people (e.g., families, teams, classes, schools, countries). Try to be as specific as possible in describing how the decisions are made. After you have at least four different examples, discuss the advantages and disadvantages of each way of making group decisions, and draw a conclusion in a summary statement to present to the class.

Group or organization	Who makes the decisions?	How is the decision made?	Who is affected by the decisions?
1.
2.
3.
4.
What type of decision making does your group find to be the most fair? What type is the most efficient?
Develop a summary statement or conclusion about decision making in groups. Decisions made for groups should be ....			