APPLICATIONS

General Learning Outcome 1: Students will use Spanish in a variety of situations and for a variety of purposes.

The specific learning outcomes under the heading Applications deal with what the students will be able to do with the Spanish language, that is, the functions they will be able to perform and the contexts in which they will be able to operate. This functional competence, also called actional competence, is important for a content-based or task-based approach to language learning where students are constantly engaged in meaningful tasks (Celce-Murcia, Dörnyei, and Thurrell).

The functions are grouped under six cluster headings—see the illustration on the preceding page. Under each of these headings, there are one or more strands. Each strand deals with a specific language function (e.g., share factual information). Students at any grade level will be able to share factual information. Beginning learners will do this in very simple ways (e.g., “This is my dog.”). As students gain more knowledge and experience, they will broaden the range of subjects they can deal with, they will learn to share information in writing as well as orally, and they will be able to handle formal and informal situations.

Different models of communicative competence have organized language functions in a variety of ways. The organizational structure chosen here reflects the needs and interests of students in a classroom where activities are focused on meaning and are interactive. For example, the strand entitled manage group actions has been included to ensure that students acquire the language necessary to function independently in small groups, since this is an effective way of organizing second language classrooms. The strands under the cluster heading to extend their knowledge of the world will accommodate a content-based approach to language learning where students learn content from another subject area as they learn the Spanish language.

The level of linguistic, sociolinguistic, and discourse competence that students will exhibit when carrying out the functions is defined in the specific learning outcomes for Language Competence for each course. To know how well students will be able to perform the specific function, the Applications learning outcomes must be read in conjunction with the Language Competence learning outcomes.

Provide each group with a different article on the same topic written in Spanish from magazines, newspapers, radio or TV programs, or documentaries. Have each group generate four questions based on key information. Then have students regroup so that each member of the group has a different article, with four questions (Jigsaw). Have students then pool their information and ask each other the generated questions in order to get a complete picture of the topic. ➤ Construct an anticipation guide that consists of three to eight short statements that reflect major ideas around the themes of the media and its impact or around a current event. Present the statements to the students and ask them to either agree or disagree, justifying their choice based on their current information or knowledge. Have students read, view, or listen to the materials on the topics of the impact of the media or a current event. Then have students return to their anticipation guides to determine whether their thinking has altered by the exposure to the new content, and to identify ideas that have been confirmed (Manitoba Education and Training, Grades 5 to 8 English Language Arts: A Foundation for Implementation, Grade 6 – 11).

SUGGESTIONS FOR ASSESSMENT

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- When students work with magazine or newspaper articles, look for evidence that they are able to ask appropriate questions to find key information.

Language Use Strategies Outcomes:

- predict meaning by interpreting graphics and pictures
- locate familiar words/focus on key words
- use the context to support inferences about the information
- focus on finding the key information they need

- When students work with anticipation guides, look for evidence that they are able to

- express an opinion/preference using support data/justification
- use information found in materials which they have viewed or listened to in order to support/refute opinions
- speak with comfort and confidence about opinions and preferences (language competence, interactive fluency)

Language Competence

LANGUAGE COMPETENCE

General Learning Outcome 2: Students will use Spanish effectively and competently.

Language competence is a broad term that includes linguistic or grammatical competence, discourse competence, sociolinguistic or sociocultural competence, and what might be called textual competence. The specific learning outcomes under Language Competence deal with knowledge of the Spanish language and the ability to use that knowledge to interpret and produce meaningful texts appropriate to the situation in which they are used. Language competence is best developed in the context of activities or tasks where the language is used for real purposes, in other words, in practical applications.

The various components of language competence are grouped under four cluster headings—see the illustration on the preceding page. Under each of these headings there are several strands. Each strand deals with a single aspect of language competence. For example, under the cluster heading attend to form, there is a strand for phonology (pronunciation, stress, intonation), orthography (spelling, mechanical features), lexicon (vocabulary words and phrases), and grammatical elements (syntax and morphology).

Although the learning outcomes isolate these individual aspects, language competence should be developed through learning activities that focus on meaningful uses of the Spanish language and on language in context. Tasks will be chosen based on the needs, interests, and experiences of students. The vocabulary, grammar structures, text forms, and social conventions necessary to carry out a task will be taught, practised, and assessed as students are involved in various aspects of the task itself, not in isolation.

Strategic competence is often closely associated with language competence, since students need to learn ways to compensate for low proficiency in the early stages of learning if they are to engage in authentic language use from the beginning. This component is included in the language use strategies in the Strategies section.

2.3 interpret and produce written texts (continued) 2.3.4 Representation <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ express meaning through the use of multiple visual elements in a variety of media in guided and unguided situations	<ul style="list-style-type: none">➤ Have students use a selection of age-appropriate Spanish-language resources (e.g., magazine articles, videos, Internet) to research a topic (e.g., fashion, sport, music). Form groups and ask each group to create and present a visual display (e.g., collage, chart, poster, brochure, mobile) based on the research (BC Resource Package, 22). ➤ Ask each student to choose and practise a simple Spanish poem and to create a visual that represents the work's main ideas. Students can then read their poems and present their creative works to the class (BC Resource Package, 48). ➤ Have each student select a short article from a newspaper in Spanish, identify three interesting facts in it, and report them to the class. Ask students to present their information in visual formats, with some key words in Spanish added, or exchange visual displays and articles with classmates (BC Resource Package, 30).

SUGGESTIONS FOR ASSESSMENT

- When students create visual displays after exploring articles and reference materials, look for evidence that they are able to
 - communicate thoughts, ideas, and feelings clearly
 - represent the main topics and information accurately
 - include key words or phrases as labels
 - identify their intended audience
 - identify their purpose (what they are trying to communicate)
 - use a variety of visual media
 - work in unguided situations

- When students work with newspaper articles and convey interesting facts to the class, look for evidence that they are able to
 - communicate thoughts, ideas, and feelings clearly
 - use key words and phrases

2.4 apply knowledge of the sociocultural context 2.4.1 Register <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ use suitable, simple formal language in a variety of contexts	<ul style="list-style-type: none">➤ Provide students with examples of letters or postcards that were written to describe experiences during travel to various destinations. Discuss with students the type of language used in a familiar writing context such as a postcard. Identify specific vocabulary, language structures, etc. that correspond to a formal or informal register. Have students write a letter or a postcard to a friend, teacher, or family member. The letter or postcard would describe the student’s experiences during a trip to a Spanish-speaking country.➤ Form groups and provide each group with a different Letter to the Editor. Have students read the letter together, examining the organization, sentence structure, and vocabulary used in such a letter. Discuss the audience and purpose of a Letter to the Editor and establish the relationship between the audience, purpose, and language. Have students then write a Letter to the Editor on a current issue that interests them.
2.4.2 Idiomatic Expressions <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ examine the role of idiomatic expressions in culture	<ul style="list-style-type: none">➤ Have students view Spanish commercials and have students work in small groups to identify popular, contemporary expressions (e.g., “Got Milk?”—English).

SUGGESTIONS FOR ASSESSMENT

- Work with students to develop a checklist they can use for self and peer assessment of their letters or postcards. The checklist might include items such as the following:
 - vocabulary and sentence structure suit audience and purpose
 - greeting and closing suit audience and purpose
 - meaning is clear
 - punctuation is correct (language competence, attend to form)
 - spelling is correct (language competence, attend to form)

(See criteria for written material assessment in Classroom Assessment, p. 12.)

- Work with students to develop a checklist they can use for self and peer assessment of their Letter to the Editor. The checklist might include items such as the following:
 - audience and purpose are clear
 - sentence structure and vocabulary are appropriate to audience and purpose
 - organization and form is appropriate to a Letter to the Editor
 - formal register is used
 - punctuation is correct (language competence, attend to form)
 - spelling is correct (language competence, attend to form)

- When students watch Spanish commercials, look for evidence that they are able to
 - identify key vocabulary in order to decipher/ understand idiomatic expressions
 - use visual clues to help provide context

Either in pairs or small groups, have students place the text in sequential order. Have students identify the words or expressions that helped them recreate the text in the correct order. As an extension, have students retell the story. ➤ Provide students with a variety of texts on the same topic (e.g., TV, radio, and magazine advertisements, letters to the editor, news articles, political propaganda, etc.). Each group may receive a different type of text. Have each group analyze verb tenses used, connecting words, points of view, target audience, and text organization. Each group presents its findings to the class. Have students then choose one type and produce their own text, using the information presented in class as a guideline. ➤ Have students survey informational text to determine how authors present and organize information. Discuss how authors highlight significant information through the use of typographical features such as bold print, italics, shading, icons, and fonts. Students work in pairs or small groups to create questions using key words which are found in headings, sub-headings, bold print, or italics. Students then read the text in order to answer their questions or the questions of another pair/group (Manitoba Education and Training, Grades 5 to 8 English Language Arts: A Foundation for Implementation, Grade 5 – 234).

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- As students reorganize a cartoon/legend/myth into sequential order, look for evidence that they are able to
 - use visual clues to help create context
 - identify words/expressions that help create sequence
 - retell story, reflecting the main ideas
 - retell the story, using words/expressions that help create sequence (sequential markers)

- As students analyze different types of text, look for evidence that they are able to
 - ask appropriate questions to find the necessary information
 - identify the target audience and purpose of text
 - explain how text is organized and give possible reasons for organization
 - identify verb tenses and connecting words that are common in text

- When students analyze informational texts and prepare questions based on headings, sub-headings, bold print, or italics, look for evidence that students are able to
 - identify typographical features of the text and give possible reasons for their use
 - use key words in headings, etc. in order to create questions
 - find answers to questions with the help of headings, key words, and phrases

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- When students write their own newspaper or magazine article, provide them with a checklist for self and peer assessment. Criteria might include the following:
 - specific purpose and audience are evident
 - headline is evident, clear
 - lead relates to main point and draws reader in
 - 6 W questions provide details to support main point
 - appropriate ending

Language Competence, Attend to Form Outcomes:

- verb tenses are used correctly, agreement of verbs/adjectives is correct
- spelling is correct

- When students prepare a debate, provide students with assessment criteria before they begin. Criteria might include the following:
 - clear message/opinion is given
 - opinions are supported with reasons/proof/details
 - language structures related to giving opinions are used effectively and appropriately (applications)
 - debate conforms to the standard structure

(See an example of debate assessment criteria in Planning, p. 94.)
- When students prepare role plays around travel situations, look for evidence that they are able to use interaction patterns typical for the context.

GLOBAL CITIZENSHIP

General Learning Outcome 3: Students will acquire the knowledge, skills, and attitudes to be effective global citizens, through the exploration of the cultures of the Spanish-speaking world.

The learning outcomes for Global Citizenship deal with a broad range of knowledge, skills, and attitudes needed to be effective global citizens—in other words, with the development of intercultural competence. The concept of global citizenship encompasses citizenship at all levels, from the local school and community to Canada and the world.

The various components of global citizenship are grouped under three cluster headings—see the illustration on the preceding page. Under each of these headings there are several strands. Each strand deals with a single aspect of intercultural competence. For example, under the cluster heading study historical and contemporary elements of Spanish-speaking cultures, there are strands for the processes and methods of acquiring knowledge about Spanish-speaking cultures, the cultural knowledge thus acquired, applications of that knowledge to aid comprehension and to communicate in appropriate ways, positive attitudes toward Spanish-speaking cultures, as well as knowledge of the diversity within those cultures.

Developing cultural knowledge and skills is a lifelong process. Knowledge of one's own culture is acquired over a lifetime. Cultures change over time. Within any national group, there may be a dominant culture or cultures and a number of minority cultures. Rather than try to develop an extensive bank of knowledge about the Spanish-speaking cultures, it is more important for students to learn the processes and methods of accessing and analyzing cultural practices. Students will gain cultural knowledge in the process of developing these skills. In this way, if they encounter elements of the Spanish-speaking cultures they have not learned about in class, they will have the skills and abilities to deal with them effectively and appropriately.

The affirm diversity heading covers knowledge, skills, and attitudes that are developed as a result of bringing other languages and cultures into relationship with one's own. There is a natural tendency, when learning a new language and culture, to compare it with what is familiar. Many students leave a second language learning experience with a heightened awareness and knowledge of their own language and culture. They will also be able to make some generalizations about languages and cultures based on their experiences and those of their classmates who may have a variety of cultural backgrounds. This will provide students with an understanding of diversity within both a global and a Canadian context.

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- Look for evidence that students are able to
 - identify and describe characteristic style or styles
 - identify historical elements that influenced the famous artist
 - explain how the historical elements influenced the life and works of the artist

- As students analyze media from the Spanish-speaking world, look for evidence that students
 - use a variety of sources and understand why this is necessary
 - identify similarities and differences between North American media and Hispanic media
 - identify key characteristics apparent in the media form studied (language competence, discourse)

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- When students investigate and report on aspects of early Spanish exploration and immigration in North America, discuss assessment criteria before they begin their projects. Assessment criteria might include the following:
 - offers some insight and thoughtful speculation about contributions of Spanish-speaking cultures
 - bases conclusions and generalizations about contributions logically on the information presented
 - takes an open and objective stance that suggests respect for diversity
 - shows awareness of the complexity of cultural impact (e.g., avoids stereotyping)
 - provides thorough, relevant details and examples to add interest and illustrate key points

- Before students prepare reports on the contributions of Spanish-speaking individuals to their own countries and the world, discuss criteria such as the following:
 - focuses on the individual's accomplishments and contributions
 - shows insight into the context and importance of the contribution
 - information is accurate
 - uses relevant visual materials, music, or other features to elaborate the topic

Following the brainstorming activity, in small groups, have students discuss their personal reasons for studying Spanish. ➤ Discuss with students ways in which they can use another language in the global marketplace. Examples might include telephone conversations, meetings, email, fax, etc. Provide students with opportunities to simulate business situations in which a second language would be necessary. Alternatively, have students make connections with world businesses via the Internet in order to apply their knowledge of a another language in a real setting.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ASSESSMENT

- Create an oral observation rubric appropriate for this task and record your assessment of individual students.

STRATEGIES

General Learning Outcome 4: Students will know and use various strategies to maximize the effectiveness of learning and communication.

Under the Strategies heading are specific learning outcomes that will help students learn and communicate more effectively. Strategic competence has long been recognized as an important component of communicative competence. The learning outcomes that follow deal not only with compensation and repair strategies, important in the early stages of language learning when proficiency is low, but also with strategies for language learning, language use in a broad sense, as well as general learning strategies that help students acquire content. Although people may use strategies unconsciously, the learning outcomes deal only with the conscious use of strategies.

The strategies are grouped under three cluster headings—see the illustration on the preceding page. Under each of these headings there are several strands. Each strand deals with a specific category of strategy. Language learning and general learning strategies are categorized as cognitive, metacognitive, and social/affective. The language use strategies are organized by communicative mode: interactive, interpretive, and productive.

The strategies that students choose depend on the task they are engaged in as well as on other factors, such as their preferred learning style, personality, age, attitude, and cultural background. Strategies that work well for one person may not be effective for another person or may not be suitable in a different situation. For this reason it is not particularly useful to say that students should be aware of, or able to use, a specific strategy in a particular course. Consequently, the specific learning outcomes describe the students' knowledge of and ability to use general types of strategies. More specific strategies for each general category or type are included in the comprehensive list of strategies in Appendix E. The specific strategies provided in the comprehensive list are not prescriptive but are provided as an illustration of how the general strategies in the specific learning outcomes might be developed.

Teachers need to know and be able to demonstrate a broad range of strategies from which students are then able to choose in order to communicate effectively. Strategies of all kinds are best taught in the context of learning activities where students can apply them immediately and then reflect on their use.

General Learning Outcome 4: Strategies Students will know and use various strategies to maximize the effectiveness of learning and communication. 4.1 language learning strategies 4.1.1 Cognitive <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ select and use appropriate cognitive strategies to enhance language learning in a variety of situations (e.g., use word maps, mind maps, diagrams, charts, or other graphic representations to make information easier to understand and remember; find information using reference materials such as dictionaries, textbooks, and grammar references) 4.1.2 Metacognitive <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ select and use appropriate metacognitive strategies to enhance language learning in a variety of situations (e.g., be aware of the potential of learning through direct exposure to the language, know how strategies may enable them to cope with texts containing unknown elements)	➤ Before beginning a project, provide students with the opportunity to examine different reference materials. Have students work in groups. Provide each group with a different source of information to work with (e.g., dictionaries, textbooks, grammars, computer programs, etc.). Have each group respond to specific questions about the reference material to help students focus on the particular uses of the material. Then have each group prepare a poster which outlines the organization/specific uses of the reference material with which they worked. Students then report their findings to the class. ➤ Provide students with a checklist of language acquisition strategies. Have students check the ones they have used and identify those they have found particularly useful (e.g., use visual clues to create context, listen for key words in a dialogue/conversation, watch gestures and body language to help decipher meaning, illustrate new vocabulary in a personal dictionary, use acronyms to help remember specific grammatical rules/structures, etc.).

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- When students work in groups to examine different resource materials, look for evidence that they are able to
 - explain how the material is organized
 - provide specific uses for material
 - suggest ways in which material can be used for specific projects
 - use a variety of reference materials when working on projects
 - use reference materials independently

- Have students write a learning log after they have completed the checklist. The learning log should identify methods that are useful to the students and why, as well as a new method that the student will try in the future.

4.1 language learning strategies (continued) 4.1.3 Social/Affective <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ select and use appropriate social and affective strategies to enhance language learning in a variety of situations (e.g., repeat new words and expressions that occur in conversations in which they participate, make use of them as soon as appropriate)	➤ Have students work in groups of three to prepare a skit about studying abroad and looking for an apartment. Three scenes could be included: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Preparing for a trip abroad2. Registration, getting familiarized3. Looking for an apartment Have students pretend that one person in the presentation has trouble with Spanish and have students repeat important expressions several times throughout the presentation. Have students in the audience note the repeated expressions. Have students then discuss the effectiveness of repetition of expressions as a communication strategy.
4.2 language use strategies 4.2.1 Interactive <ul style="list-style-type: none">❖ select and use appropriate interactive strategies in a variety of situations (e.g., repeat part of what someone has said to confirm mutual understanding)	➤ Show students a TV interview. Have them note and then interpret the fillers, hesitation devices, etc. used during the interview. Then have students each prepare five questions that they could ask a classmate about a current event or issue. Students then work in partners to interview each other, paying special attention to fillers, hesitation devices, and circumlocution used. Alternatively, two students at a time could be asked to interview each other in front of the class.

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- When students prepare skits about studying abroad, provide assessment criteria before they begin. Look for evidence that they are able to
 - use and emphasize new vocabulary and structures
 - sustain interactions using a variety of strategies (e.g., body language, rephrasing or repeating information, asking questions)
 - respond appropriately to questions and cues from others

- As students prepare questions and interview a classmate, look for evidence that they are able to
 - formulate appropriate questions
 - use fillers and hesitation devices during interview
 - speak clearly, with accurate pronunciation and intonation (language competence, attend to form)

Reread the heading, then move through the paragraph looking for bold print, italics, names, dates, or key words on the topic.6. After skimming all the paragraphs in the selection, read the last paragraph of the selection again. ➤ Have students work in pairs. One student reads a portion of an article out loud while the other student takes notes. Have students then change roles, continuing the reading-note-taking cycle until the article is completed. Have students rewrite the article and then verify their article with the original article for accuracy. Have students first review their own texts with the help of Spanish dictionaries and verb books. Then have a classmate edit the text. Students then correct their texts and either submit them to another classmate or the teacher for a final editing. Students then prepare the final copy of their text.

SUGGESTED LEARNING RESOURCES

- Provide students with a checklist for self assessment of skimming strategies, based on guideline provided. Look for evidence that students are able to
 - focus on key words, phrases
 - use bold print, italics, etc. to find information
