

What We Can Do

It has been said that citizenship is really about learning to live together in a group or community. Although it is true that young citizens of Canada cannot vote or hold political office until the age of 18, there are many things they can do that are examples of citizenship in action.

As a group, develop a list of actions and decisions that you can take as citizens to support democratic principles such as equality, freedom, and community participation.

The principle of equality means:	Actions we can take that show respect for equality:
The principle of freedom means:	Actions we can take that show respect for freedom:
The principle of citizen participation means:	Actions we can take that contribute to our groups and communities:
