

Self-Assessment Chart: Geography and Demography

Physical Geography 	Human Geography 	Demographics
I can define the term physical geography and give two examples of elements of physical geography.	I can define the term human geography and give two examples of elements of human geography.	I can define the term demographics and give two examples of elements studied in demographics.
I can name the physical regions of Canada and describe at least one of the defining characteristics for each region.	I can name all of the provinces and territories and locate them on a map.	I can identify on a map at least four of the most densely populated areas of Canada .
I can describe at least two characteristics of the physical geography of Canada that make our country unique.	I can name the capital city of each province and territory.	I can describe two current demographic trends in Canada.
I have read news articles or editorials about the importance of physical geography in Canada's identity as a country.	I can locate all the capital cities of the provinces and territories on a map of Canada.	I have read some current news articles about demographic trends in Canada.
I have a relatively accurate mental map of the Canadian territory.	I can locate on a map of Canada distinguishing features of human activities in each region.	I can name at least two factors that have caused demographic change in modern Canada.
Other:	Other:	I can provide at least two pieces of evidence to prove that cultural diversity is a distinguishing characteristic of Canada.