

Human Ecology

The focus of human ecology is to prepare students for living independently and working successfully with others. Human ecology courses engage students in an action-oriented approach that builds capacity for decision-making and problem-solving skills through everyday situations within the areas of family studies, food and nutrition, and textile arts and design.

Course Description

Grade 12 Human Ecology: This course will encompass areas of study within family studies, food and nutrition, and textile arts and design. Family studies emphasizes the transition from adolescence to adulthood with the ability to examine and practise skills that help develop healthy interpersonal relationships. Food and nutrition is a critical examination of the individual as a responsible citizen through examining food security and accessibility. Textile arts and design focuses on advanced skill development in textiles. Students will examine accessibility and use of textiles, manufacturing social responsibilities, and global influences on design trends.
